Discovering Your Inner Potential

Inner potential is a hidden treasure present within us. But the only thing about it is that, we are not aware of it. It may be because, some of us might have not come across some specific stimuli generating situations in our life or might be because of poor perceptions in those situations. What are those specific situations? They're situations which make us feel bad about ourselves, may be because we are lacking in some specific competencies. Now, what do these specific situations do? they act as an external stimulus for us, which may ultimately be responsible for our awakening of inner potential.

A quote by Dr. Varghese Kurien, the founder of "Amul" brand of milk products, once said "In every crisis, if you look carefully, you will spot an Opportunity. My insistence is on finding and seizing that opportunity". I never try to side step a crisis, the more I am tempted to rush at it, grasp it by the Horns and man-oeuvre it until it gives me what I want".

Here, I cannot stop myself by taking an example from own life, which made me search for my inner potential. Since, at present I am in teaching Profession, I would like to share this with the students, because most of us come across such situations and how one can overcome the impact produced by these situations. This experience is of class tenth. My father was a Government servant and the job was transferable. We were shifted from some state of "Northern India" to some other state in "Southern India", the medium of teaching in Southern India was English, whereas in Northern India it used to be in Hindi. I was not at all good in speaking English, there were only few students in our class who could speak well in this language.

One day I was asked by our English teacher to read out certain chapter in English and answer few questions then, But I couldn't even understand the meaning of the sentences written and therefore couldn't answer anything. She shouted and used harsh words to me, I felt quite bad and insulted that day. The next day I went to the library and brought two English story books to learn, but when I started reading those books, I found that I could not understand anything. I found another way of improving my language skills, I thought how a small child starts speaking any language just by continuously listening to it from his childhood. I started listening to English news which used to come on National television channel - BBC news on short wave channel. I then made my habit to sit on the chair near the radio and listen to the BBC news. I was determined to learn the language. I had a bicycle which I used to take for riding daily in the playground present at the back side of my house and used to speak loudly to myself. The practice continued till I completed my graduation. My continual efforts made me improve my language skills. At this age I realised that the potential was with in me, only waiting for a specific situation or a "Positive stimuli", that could initiate it. We all have tremendous abilities in ourselves, the only thing is that we are not aware of these. We all get some benefits or drawbacks according to the families in which we take birth. But instead crying over the drawbacks, we should develop our inner potential by putting our continuous efforts, so that we can walk in parallel with the world.

STUDENT'S CORNER

You've Got What It Takes

The other day I read a quote somewhere which said " You've got what it takes, but it will take everything you've got" and its kind of left me in a whirl of thoughts. It just got into my head, that I couldn't really get over of. The thoughts kept swirling and I discovered something that I guess everyone knows but never really paid attention to.

When you dream of something, you start thinking of all the possibilities to get to your dream. You create a whole lot of planned chart in your head to get to it. But you have to remember that dreams will merely remain dreams if you won't work upon it. So, to make them happen. Here are some steps you can follow to achieve what you want-

Dream-make it a thought-plan it-work on it-if you fail-start all over again-work until you achieve it.

But then tell me how many of you actually get started with your dreams? Very few of you or even though you do it's just a matter of some days. We all want to live in our Dreamland and have some comforting dreams of being successful but being successful demands whole lot of YOU. It takes everything you have and above all, CONSISTENCY. Consistency is the key, getting out of your comfort zone and getting started. Dream it, and once you're done dreaming stand up and get started that very moment. Don't wait for the perfect moment, right now is the perfect moment cause remember, YOU'VE GOT EVERYTHING THAT IT TAKES. If you can dream it, you can achieve it.
