How to Crack a Job Interview:

You've got to use this time wisely, or else you might as well have just declined the interview. But don't worry, here are some of the best interview preparation tips out there to ensure you are ready to meet them when they're ready to see you.

1. Research the Company and Use Their Products Just like they'll do their due diligence on you, researching the company to know what they do and how they operate is a must. Also, double-check if the company's a match for you.
2. Prepare Questions to Ask Them Interviews are not all about them getting to know you. In 2018, you have to speak up and come at them with your own questions. You're bound to hear, "Do you have any questions you'd like to ask?" Don't give no as an answer.
3. Be Prepared to Answer Their Questions This is an interview—you're gonna get questions. While you may not know how it'll play out, there are some general questions that are asked in most interviews.
4. Follow the Proper Dress Code For women: Choose a solid-color pant suit with conservatively-colored shoes and shirt or blouse to match. Avoid wearing heels and too much makeup, jewelry, and perfume. If you choose to wear a skirt instead of the pants, pair them with light or skin-tone hosiery.
5. Dress to Impress It probably goes without saying that you'll want to choose from your best outfits to wear for your all-important interview. Don't forget to iron, and don't use too much perfume. Polish your shoes before leaving home. Trim your fingernails.
6. Wear a Confident Smile A friendly, confident smile is of the most important things to wear to an interview. While it won't get them to overlook your other clothing, it will work wonders in making you look like a perfect addition to their team
7. Bring Your Notes & a Copy of Your Resume One of the great things about interviews is that they can be treated like an open-book test. Not only will bringing notes help you to remember some of your answers and questions to ask.
8. Control Your Body Language Sure, you're talking with your mouth during your interview, but your gestures, posture, and body language speak inaudible volumes. Maintain a good posture, with your back straight and your head held high.
9. "Why Should We Hire You?" This can be a stumper, if not thought out before the interview. However, if you prepare, it can turn into a golden opportunity to give a winning elevator speech. Summarize your best points.
10. "Why Did You Leave Your Last Job?" At first glance, this question seems like a piece of cake, right? But there are obstacles, particularly if you didn't have an amicable parting-of-ways with your last organization.
11. "Tell Me About Yourself" This interview question is not as broad as it sounds. Hiring managers don't care where you were born and raised, what your favourite sport is, and so on. Rather, they'd like an answer back that is relevant to them.
12. "Where Do You See Yourself in 5 Years?" Most people don't have a defined plan as to where they'd like to be in 5 years, but this question is asked by employers more so they can understand a vague idea.
