Course: Women and Criminal Law

Course Code: BBLE35110

Course Objective This course is designed to explore the important and under-studied intersection between gender/women and crime. The word intersection is used because the status structures commonly used by criminologists and sociologists never occur alone. Another way of saying this is that social scientists study a number of social demographics or correlates of crime at the same time. Thus in this class women involvement in crime, whether as victims or as offenders, or as professionals engaged in the criminal justice system, a number of these variables have to be investigated (studied) at the same time. The nature and extent of women as victims, offenders, and workers in the criminal justice system will be explored. The relationship between victimization and offending and study the details of women in the criminal justice system as offenders or workers (professional as law enforcement officers, court personnel, correctional workers, etc.) will be investigated.

Student Learning Outcomes: At the end of the course the student will be able to:

1. Demonstrate their familiarity with topics associated with women (gender) and crime by being able to achieve at least 80% on any method of testing within this class
