TEACHING PEDAGOGY

We use a combination of pedagogical techniques in order to provide a holistic learning environment which can challenge learners with different abilities and also encourage critical inquiry and self-learning.

Our faculty members not only keep abreast of the recent developments and research in their respective fields, but also regularly involve students in a research-based learning. This is reflected in the various publications and conferences that our faculty members contribute to. Further there is an emphasis on teaching students to apply their conceptual knowledge to legal issues and problems. Regular expert speaker sessions and seminars with eminent scholars across different sectors in India and outside. We use Court Room Exercises that emphasis on research, in depth analysis of precedents and oration so as to familiarize students with the court room atmosphere. All students compulsorily participate in Court Room Exercises as it also forms a part of the evaluation scheme of law subjects. These exercises are conducted by faculty members teaching the respective subjects and the factual problem which the students argue on deals with the particular area of law of that subject.

The University imparts instruction through lectures, seminars and tutorials. Study material is distributed for each course and forms the basis of class discussion and interactive learning so that students remain engaged. Moreover, there is constant dialogue in class on contemporary issues pertinent to the curriculum. Each course also includes a project assignment to develop research, analysis and writing skills.

Some courses are taught collaboratively so that the available expertise is optimally used, and the education is interdisciplinary. Simulated settings such as courtroom exercises and mediations maximize participation and develop professional skills. The University also has the advantage of inviting sitting and retired judges from the Supreme Court and High Court, leading lawyers and academicians, and retired judicial officers, for lectures, seminars and discussions with students and faculty.

The University also involves students as an integral part of research projects that it undertakes. The diversity of projects ensures that students are exposed to a wide range of experiences relevant to understanding the role of law in society.

In order to enable the students to gain a better insight into the working of the legal profession RNBGU employs a clinical pedagogy with a practical approach to all the courses. This includes:

- Problem Solving
- Case Study
- Moot Court
- Research Writing
- Project Work

CONTINUOUS ASSESSMENT

School of Law evaluates students' performance through continuous assessment by way of various projects and assignments as part of internal academic activities. Home assignments and research activities makes learning process more interesting and indirectly helps them to prepare for external examination and Provision for Self-Learning.

The examination system of the University is designed to test systematically the student's progress in class, laboratory and field work through continuous evaluation in place of the usual 'make or mar' performance in a single examination. Students are given periodical tests, short quizzes, home assignments, seminars, tutorials, term papers in addition to the examination at the end of each semester. The final result in each course is calculated on the basis of this continuous assessment and performance in the end semester examination.

The Semester Pattern is designed with continuous assessment system. The continuous assessment made for a candidate in a particular semester shall be final.
